Get Your Noodle Orders In!

Noodle orders are being taken now. If you want to place an order, contact Sue Seitzinger.

We have many musicians in our congregation. Shelly is looking for some of them to come forward and share their musical skills with us to enhance our worship time. If suggestions are needed, Shelly has instrumental music in the church's music library. Please come and do a prelude, an offertory, or even take a space for special music. Don't be shy. Your contributions will be appreciated by all! Contact Shelly

Divine Moment for Gen Z

University in Wilmore, Kentucky. Courtesy of Sarah Thomas Baldwin

Each historical move of God is unique. "The wind blows where it wishes," said Jesus. With so many other onlookers, we have been prayerfully mindful of the student-led renewal and revival services taking place since February 8 on the campuses of Asbury University and Asbury Theological Seminary in Wilmore, Kentucky. From all reports, students are encountering the Living God.

For several decades, Good News was headquartered in Wilmore. In 1970, Dr. Dennis Kinlaw was the president of then-Asbury College. At the time, the school was the epicenter of a powerful outpouring of the Spirit among the college students. "The young people in this movement have been the key,” Dr. Kinlaw wrote in Good News magazine more than 50 years ago. “Faculty and administrators have been chauffeurs and guides while the Spirit has used the young to open closed doors and storm the enemy’s bastions.”

Decades later, the same could be said of the spiritual stirring on campus in Wilmore. Facebook and other social media outlets have publicized the events in Hughes Auditorium to a worldwide audience. There are no celebrity personalities or “influencers” at the helm of this organic movement – only students and a very capable campus administration. We have pulled together a non-exhaustive collection of excerpts, quotes, and observations from special voices – undergrads to PhDs – to share in this Perspective to give insight, encouragement, and context.

When Streams of Living Water Become a Flood: Revival at Asbury University

What do you do when the streams of living water suddenly burst into a flood? The spiritual outpouring that began at Asbury University on Feb. 8 was spontaneous and unexpected. After an ordinary chapel service, a number of students felt called to linger and praise God. As students responded, the Spirit brought an immense sense of joy and peace. More students came. The Spirit remained, and so did the students. Worship has continued ever since, and—as a result of social media posts—thousands of Jesus-seekers have poured into the small town of Wilmore, Kentucky. Asbury is no stranger to revivals; spontaneous worship has broken out multiple times in the past century, although the 1970 revival is perhaps the most well-known. Ever since, alumni and community members have prayed for God to grace the campus once again with a powerful experience of the Holy Spirit. The surprise at this latest outpouring is reminiscent of the shock felt by the disciples upon hearing of Peter’s release from prison in Acts 12:1-19: even though they had been praying for this very event, they weren’t ready when it happened. When Rhoda answered the door to discover a freed Peter standing before her, she was so overjoyed that she left poor Peter standing at the gate as she ran back to tell the other disciples.

We, too, were shocked and overjoyed at our unexpected—but long hoped for—visitation.
